DETAILED ACTION

Applicant's reply filed on 06/01/2009 is acknowledged.

Claims 2,4,7 and 8 are cancelled. Claims 1,3,5 and 6 are pending and under consideration.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

- (a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.
- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The Yoon, Lee, Chung, Cha declaration under 37 CFR 1.132 filed 10/07/2009 is sufficient to overcome the rejection of claims 1,3-6 and 8 based upon 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by Cha (October 2005, IDS).

The Yoon, Lee, Chung, Cha declaration under 37 CFR 1.132 filed 10/07/2009 is sufficient to overcome the rejection of claims 1,4-6 and 8 based upon 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by Yoon (October 2005, IDS)

The rejection of claims 4 and 8 under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Yoon (2000; IDS) is rendered moot by the cancellation of the claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The rejection of claims 1,3 and 5-6 under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yoon, 2000; IDS) in view of US 5,976,567 (published 11/02/1999) is withdrawn in light of Applicant's arguments.. The references did not teach use of nitrogen slush.

Claims 1,3 and 5-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yoon, 2000; IDS) in view of US 5,976,567 (published 11/02/1999) and further in view of (Martino et al, 1996; IDS).

Yoon taught exposing mature human oocytes to cryoprotectant prior to loading onto an electron microscope grid. The grid was plunged into liquid nitrogen and stored in liquid nitrogen until devitrification (paragraphs 3 and 4). Yoon taught devitrifying the oocytes prior to ICSI.

Yoon did not teach use of a gold grid or use of nitrogen slush.

However, at the time of filing it was well known to one skilled in the art that electron microscopy grids were made of a number of different materials including copper and gold. Both copper and gold are excellent conductors useful in quick freezing of tissues. For example, '567 taught placing vesicles on a gold electron microscopy grid and vitrifying the vesicles by rapid freezing in liquid ethane cooled with liquid nitrogen (col. 40, lines 2-7). Thus, it would have merely been a matter of design choice to the skilled artisan to choose a gold grid from amongst the many well-known choices of grids for use in vitrification.

Additionally, the use of nitrogen slush for rapid cooling of oocytes on electron microscope grids was taught by Martino et al. Martino taught the use of both liquid nitrogen and nitrogen slush for cryopreservation of oocytes. Martino taught that rapid cooling can have damaging effects on oocytes and the damage that occurs is species specific. One means of experimenting to obtain higher effective freezing rates is to alter the freezing rate by use of straws vs. grids as well as use of nitrogen slush as opposed to liquid nitrogen. Martino suggests that some species might freeze better in slush while others would fare better in liquid nitrogen (see, in particular, page 1066, col.2).

In KSR International Co. v. Teleflex Inc., 82 USPQ2d 1385 (U.S. 2007), the Supreme Court particularly emphasized “the need for caution in granting a patent based on a combination of elements found in the prior art,” (Id. At 1395) and discussed circumstances in which a patent might be determined to be obvious. Importantly, the Supreme Court reaffirmed principles based on its precedent that “[t]he combination of familiar elements according to known methods is likely to be obvious when it does no more than yield predictable results.” (Id. At 1395.) In the instant case, with regard to the use of gold grids, the difference between that claimed and that taught in the art amounts to no more than a simple substitution of one known equivalent for another to obtain predictable results.

Additionally, it would have been obvious to substitute nitrogen slush for the freezing of oocytes in place of the liquid nitrogen used by Yoon. Martino taught that different sized oocytes would be affected differently from different rates of cooling. Thus, one would have been motivated to alter the freezing rate of human oocytes by use of slush nitrogen in place of liquid nitrogen.
